I received an email from Frederic today asking to please pay the remainder of the amount for the desk (20 000) so that shipping can commence.

According to the shippers latest email the desk was wrapped and ready at the harbor and he was just waiting for the shipping payment in order to ship the desk.

Rich has confirmed that the wire that he transferred 2 days ago has arrived in the shippers account today.

In order to try and expedite it, and as I don't know whether frederic does have any control over the desks departure or is just saying this to get us to pay, I have ignored Frederic and sent the following to the shipper:

'My bank shows that the transfer hit your account, please confirm receipt of the payment and let me know when shipping will commence so that I can inform the owner and make provisions on my end.'

I will follow up with the shipper early in the morning and will ignore Frederic for the time being, unless you instruct me differently.
