TO NO ONE please

so yesterday [REDACTED] packed up all the personal stuff in his office.
he left his wall art so that his staff wouldn't freak out.
i think he's close to leaving - or maybe it feels good for him to be able to just move things out.

[REDACTED] is really messing things up stalling innovation
making it near impossible to get anything done feels like things will come to a head very soon we've been talking about him leaving and what it means and what he wants next.

he's mentioned a few things -

1. (although never has said this before) apple. he loves what they do - we don't really know anyone there. do you? thought of [REDACTED] maybe? how do you even start to negotiate these things or express interest?
2. walt (from the wall st journal) who runs "all things D" might be retiring soon. he could take on a small role now as a product reviewer.
3. harvard business school (visiting professor)
4. go to medical school (if he could get in, he might be too old)

what do you think?
