

To: jeevacation@gmail.com[jeevacation@gmail.com]; jeffrey epstein[jeevacation@gmail.com]
From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Sun 2/26/2012 2:15:30 PM
Subject: FW: school

this email

---

From: [REDACTED]
To: jeevacation@gmail.com
Subject: school
Date: Sat, 25 Feb 2012 04:33:37 +0300

thanks for calling Jeffrey.. nice hearing you again

yes I agree - we cant have a quick answer on what to do with myself now. Here is the situation:

I am in AUstralia and am not sure if I want to do this Master in Dispute resolution because its a waste of time and money since I want to have a bar exam as fast as i can, but I love this country, Australia, so much. I dont see myself living for the next 3 years in gloomy Paris to get a full legal qualification.

This Monday I will try to talk to my university, UNSW, if they could transfer me to the J.D. so I will become a lawyer in 2 or 3 years. If they do not transfer me I can do the following:

- do this Master which will cost me about 40.000 and finish it in November, find a job and earn money for 2-3-4 years for the JD in USA, then become a lawyer in USA but only by about 28 years old...
- not to do the Master but find a job untill October and work. In October, to start Master in Paris and become a lawyer in 3 years too. then do LLM in Ivy Ligue school.
- not to do the Master, prepare for LSAT and apply for 2013 JD (but the chance I get an Ivy ligue school is so small as I am not english speaking person and I bet I could get an LLM from the same school and pass Cali or NY bar once I am a lawyer in Paris or Australia)

p s : photos in the following email

p p s : I dont play around with any boys.. so much into Ben - cant recognize myself anymore, ahah