Hi Jeffrey,

I asked Leslie to send a summary of their progress (see below).

USA today just picked up my last article:
<http://content.usatoday.com/topics/article/Jeffrey+Epstein/0ekq6av6vyawT/0>
but it takes time for the engines to bring them to the first pages.

I will bombard Leslie with more content and images.

If you don't see any progress by the end of June, then yes, I think you should consider stopping.

Hi [REDACTED],

We have added content to the websites and have moved them up the first page of results. The goal is to get them into the first and second positions. This process takes months to achieve because of the restrictions regarding the amount of information that can be added within certain time frames. In order to keep the sites viable we add content periodically. Many variables are considered by the search engines when determining position and we know what they are and we follow the restrictions carefully in order to move our content to higher positions on the search engines.

We have added content to 3 of the existing domains that you provided and will continue to do so on a regular basis. We have created dozens of profile sites and released each of the press releases provided to over 45 PR sites via Onlywire and other PR sites. We continue to backlink the sites to other sites in order to garner more rank strength on the existing websites and profile sites. This a backend activity that you won't see. As told to you in the beginning, due to the high profile nature and the number of negative links, this process will take a minimum of 6 months to a year to clear negative information from the first page. We have made great strides in moving the links up and down considering the volume of information that is at hand.

Next week we will be adding 2 other websites in order to get them to the first page results, continue backlinking the existing sites and adding more professional and social sites.

Best,
Leslie

Hi Leslie,

Thanks for speaking with me. Key points in the email to me, which I will forward:

- the progress that you see.
- what you have done so far.
- what you are working on now.
- time frame

the more names and specifics you can give me the better.

Thank you,
