Are you referring to the view looking at the south side of the new living room? If so, I am not sure. Was thinking we would minimize view of this with landscape/rock feature/low planter, similar to earlier scheme...

do we need some sort of upper gallery . facing the courtyard, simply looking at the back wall of a huge room, and a roof is not digestible you really can't see what is happening below - which is ok - but means we need to focus on what the upper terrace looks like. Will also send views from there looking east and west...

Some additional views as discussed, just for reference, The team is working on this - we have not picked up your latest comments yet - but I will be in meetings most of the day tomorrow, and wanted to get this to you. Includes views up from master bedroom, down from upper terrace (view from roof looking north is just for reference), and from upper garden. we also need to address area between living room and upper office/bedroom. Also push living room south, so there is no canyon between it and the upper garden.

More tomorrow, addressing your earlier comments.
