Well, hi to you too.

I didn't know. Send me the link....but there is no way that it can be exact if it's not floating. I have seen a table - years after I made our first prototype - that was made of cubes but they were connected by wood. Can't see through it. And the magic is that ours is jiggly. It's our first of many pieces. Anyway, that's cool that someone else thinks this aesthetic is beautiful and it's on that site. And that is EXACTLY why I want you on the board. To show us what you look at, who you talk to, etc. for highend product design. See it's starting already.

When are we meeting?

(and on a side note: did I do something to anger you? You seem really off and on with me. I can't figure out why. Jeffrey, we are friends. I am coming to you because I need your help. And also b/c you are very very rich. (grin) Money aside, I think your advice and connections and experience here would be invaluable. And also, I want to spend more time with you. Like hearing the piano and such. I want to learn from you and figure out how to show you you can trust me. With many things. The more I think about you (and even get irked by you) I realize how much I care about you. Stop being so cold. I know what's there.

I assume you know that there is the exact same design without the floating on first dibs

Hi je!

Well, after about a week of staying up all night to finish our first round of tables, we finally did it. See attached images...(but please don't show anyone). Now, I'd love to reschedule our business meeting. Would next week work for like an hour?

Basically, I want to show you other images and discuss your network as well as some investment opportunities with you. I was thinking that something like this could be mutually beneficial, to be honest. We could use funding for sure, but it might be a good move for you to be on the board of a woman owned and run engineering boutique. Plus we are science oriented and cool. We are about to do a bunch of press around our launch and we could mention it.

I'd be happy to have you explicitly associated. I know you think that "doing what I want" isn't the straight path to making millions....but I think it's my best chance. Especially because I am so good at doing what I want to do (grin).

Let me know your thoughts.
