he is too embarrassed to ask you something but has been stressing out about it for a few weeks.
you know him, he can never ask for anything for himself and is always more worried about others....so i am going to ask on his behalf

he needs somehow in NYC to live it needs to be like corporate housing, not a showplace. just somewhere for him to sleep and where Sam can stay while he's there. hotels getting too expensive, etc.
he's maxed out paying mortgage on his boston place and rent in seattle and taking care of Sam etc.
he's paying for storage for his furniture and all of his boston stuff, needs a place for a year or two anyway maybe you have something at 301 E 66th or something in the city somewhere that he can rent for cheap?

he's not super comfortable with me asking but i figured that if anyone could ask with a clear conscience and readiness for a NO it would be me!
