you are the best...I'm trying to think where I could use what we have already done....!
When you have a minute, no rush... I would like to know what the price tag would be to start fresh! thanks...

Oh, no! So sorry about that! They really cannot be remade for all the those reasons. If you can use them somewhere else, I can price it out for you using more fabric and blackout lining at a deep discount.

Just let me know.

Hello Carol! Hope you are well :)

Question for you re our master curtains...is it too late to add on the room darkening fabric to the back of the curtains? Is it too late to make the curtains wide enough so you can actually close them!? I swear, it never fails...I try to do something to save money and it comes back to bite me in the end! [REDACTED] like "why would you get curtains you can't close? there is a strip of light that comes through the sides, top and bottom of our window...why would you not do the room darkening?"

...well...to save money!?

I suppose he is happy I think of these things, but...

I have a feeling nothing can really be done now...there would be a big seem in the curtain if you add on...and who is to say the lot of fabric will match what we already have?...

In your professional opinion, what do you think? and if any of this actually is possible...what cost are we talking about!

I'm sure you love emails like this!

thanks,
