I've never heard of what your guy is saying. Why don't you schedule a conference call to resolve the issue.

Quite frankly I think he's shit, I've installed countless generator I've never heard anything like that before. Give me a call if you like.

We were at the house today and your Generator was out on failure "UNDERVOLTAGE " This was due to improper startup adjustments We made the adjustments and it is running property now.
When you will be at the house let us know and we will come by to confirm the wiring inside wiring is correct as and the transfer switch is connected and working properly

Hi Todd...nice speaking with you...please do send one of your men to our house to take down our generator serial number and any other details you may need. The generator is located behind the wing wall of our home on the garage door side of house (on Hampton Lane). The system inside the house is located in our basement in a closet with some other electrical things. If you need inside the house to have a look please let me know and I can alert the girl who helps with my son to be on the lookout for you (or your man)

If you could please forward you contract that would be great.

Thank you,
