

To: [REDACTED]
From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Mon 10/20/2014 4:13:07 PM
Subject: Re: for Jeffrey

Thanks, [REDACTED] Aren't you supposed to be on vacation or something?! Enjoy!

Best,

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]
Editor in Chief and SVP
Scientific American
[REDACTED], 9th Floor
New York, NY 10013
[REDACTED]
ScientificAmerican.com

On 10/20/14 10:44 AM, [REDACTED] wrote:

>Thank you! I have forwarded on the Jeffrey.
>
>Sent from my iPhone
>
>On Oct 20, 2014, at 9:10 AM, [REDACTED]
>[REDACTED] wrote:
>
>> Hi [REDACTED]
>>
>> Hope you are well. I traveled for a month (four places in five weeks) >>and realize I forgot to give Jeffrey some writer ideas! I am awful.
>>Please extend my apologies to him.
>>
>> I was thinking about his areas of interest. Here are three people. I >>have NOT contacted any of them, but I know them all personally and would >>be happy to connect you if he likes their background.
>>
>> [REDACTED]
>> [REDACTED] has both a physics degree AND a lot of experience covering >>neuroscience topics. He's a former AP reporter, formerly of >>BusinessWeek, spent many years running the Council for the Advancement >>of Science Writing's annual conference<the whole gig there is to scout >>out interesting stories that would make great sessions. He's currently >>writer for the Knight Science Journalism Tracker at MIT, but he's based >>here in NY. Plus, he's a swell guy. I've known him since my days at >>Popular Science<oh, at least 25 years. [REDACTED] has written several books, >>most recently Do Fathers Matter? E-mail: [REDACTED]
>> [REDACTED]
>>
>> [REDACTED]
>> [REDACTED] is a former staff editor of Scientific American, who has >>recently gone freelance to pursue his dream of writing long, long pieces >>for places like the New Yorker. I think we will all be working for him >>some day. His coverage area specialty is neuroscience, BUT he can pretty >>much do anything. I've seldom seen as impressive a young writer. Really.

>>He's in New York. E-mail: [REDACTED]
>>
> [REDACTED]
>> [REDACTED] is former editor in chief of Discover, and a lovely writer. His >>background and preference is to cover a lot of physics and astronomy.
>>He's also written a book, and is a marvelous reporter and a friend of >>mine. He's in New York. E-mail: [REDACTED]
> [REDACTED]
>>
>> I could send more. So sorry for my slowness!
>>
>> Still happy to welcome Jeffrey to our offices one Monday, if he is ever >>available. I'm traveling (London) next week, back in NY the week after >>and then away in Dubai for the Global Agenda Councils in Dubai and then >>the World Library of Science launch in Paris the second week of >>November. Back again November 17.
>>
>> Hope all is well!
>>
>> Best,
>>
>> [REDACTED]
>>
>> -----
>> [REDACTED]
>> Editor in Chief and SVP
>> Scientific American
>> [REDACTED], 9th Floor
>> New York, NY 10013
>>
>> [REDACTED]
>>
>> ScientificAmerican.com
>>
>>