Yes, a bit. The most surprising part is that Social Security Administration will not give you new numbers unless you can prove that the damage is substantial.

I should look into this again now that I am wiser and older.

Hi Lesley,

Hope all is well! Yesterday I forgot to mention my social security number was stolen years back when I lived in California but I have all the docs that prove me as the rightful owner of the numbers. When I presented to retain new numbers with authorities I was told the damage done by those that stole my numbers wasn't large enough for me to receive new numbers.

I am letting you know I can prove myself as owner, in case this comes up as a notation in any search.

Best,

Sara
