Thank you very much for this Nat. I need to run this by Mr. Epstein and the accounting dept. I will get back with you as soon as possible.

Hello Lesley,

I confirmed everything on my end, and I am attaching the quote's breakdown.

When all is said and done, the AMT will cost $11,486.31. This includes the taxes, labor charges (delivery and installation, and removal of EFX 447), Preva activation, and the AMT itself.

The Preva setup is something we have to bill as it's own item on the invoice because we submit the account information to Precor. Basically, this activation allows Precor to directly interact with the unit, as well as allowing the user to save their exercise onto a mobile device (it can do this with the Preva App or a specific set of other exercise applications). Finally, it involves installing the internet and cable connections for the machine if there are inputs at the installation area. Mr. Epstein can elect to go without the Preva and save $150.

So, since Mr. Epstein already spent $5,551.54, the difference to purchase the AMT would be $5934.77.

Please let me know if you would like to proceed.

Hi Nat...I have Merwin cc'd on this mail...I'm sure he can give you the dimensions of the elevator as well as any relevant turns the machine will need to make while on its way to the gym here...

thanks, [REDACTED]

Hello [REDACTED],

Can you provide the dimensions of the elevator? Or do I have to contact someone else (Merwin) regarding that data? I spoke to the delivery guys, and the supervisor's only concern was the elevator.
