Ok, understood,, In regard to the designers,, I 'm finding that the most of the candidates that are successful working for larger firms tend to want to remain in that structure, many seemed to have branched over to their own firm or have been in the business a long time and have been a consultant etc,, many have portfolios, etc, regardless of all of that , if they have worked on real high end residences, and the portfolios or the sites they direct me to look appealing, should I pass a resume along.
