

To: [REDACTED]
From: Robert
Sent: Wed 4/2/2014 1:51:41 PM
Subject: RE: powder room needs help!/Lights for under my cabs

I would buy a dome lower the ceiling in there to 9 feet. Then run crown molding around the ceiling and wainscoting to match dining room. It is an over looked money room because everyone that comes to your house will see it. Make the walls above the wainscoting that wavy wall that I like Porcelain tile. Walk on the wild side. Or do the wall behind the sink that wavy wall. It is only tile thick. Call the tile chick. Can you send back the rest of the that stone. How much is it worth? Cheaper now then later. Still got carpenter coming back.

-----Original Message-----

From: [REDACTED] [mailto:[REDACTED]]
Sent: Wednesday, April 02, 2014 7:35 AM
To: Robert
Subject: Re: powder room needs help!/Lights for under my cabs

Cool on blue lights and let's discuss the powder room. I like the idea of a jetson light from ceiling

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 2, 2014, at 7:02 AM, "Robert" [REDACTED] wrote:

> I will run the blue light thing through the electrician. I will also > ask the mason about the stone. If I were to do that room over I would > have put in a fypon dome in ceiling with a jetson chandelier coming from it and > added > wainscoting like the dining room. I could still do it. Fypon dome 800 > sheetrock 300 spackle wiring. The stone won't be cheap because we > have to take everything apart. So be it. I agree the room needs something.
>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: [REDACTED] [mailto:[REDACTED]]
> Sent: Tuesday, April 01, 2014 8:40 PM
> To: Bob Caffrey
> Subject: powder room needs help!/Lights for under my cabs
>

> the powder room needs help.it is boring! do we figure our the stone > for that wall? or Do we just add some crown molding? How much of a > pain in the ass would it be to do stone?
>

> Could we get royal blue light for under the cabs in my office instead > of just regular? I know it sounds crazy..but if you have been in any > restaurant/bar lately they all have those lights that actually change > the color.but it is the blue I really like.and I like the idea of the > lights costing $17 and me turning them on when I want them on.I know
> .I'm nuts.but it would look cool.Google "Blue Under Cabinet Lighting" > and click on images and check it out...
>

> <http://www.homeclick.com/wac-lighting-led-t24-2in-invisiled-2-classic-tape-1-ed-under-cabinet-light/p-466167.aspx>
>

>
>