I walked through everything yesterday with a person who would be an excellent handyman/household guy and is willing to work contractually or come on full-time. He has project management experience and is one of those all-around guys who knows how to do a lot of different things. The question is whether we can come together on a salary or his estimate for work. He is meant to send me that today.

He is the father of the son-father team who installed the tiki kitchen tile. I took him into the spaces under Cabanas 2, 4, the master, the dental room, and the FPP. I also showed him other areas that need to be addressed. He is a solid guy who does quality work.
