Thanks again for the very helpful guidance. Attaching our proposed drafts to send to the defense. Their language that we disagree with is in red and our proposed language that they rejected is in blue. We flagged footnote 2 and 3 of the questionnaire if there is additional language you think we should add. When we email the defense, we plan to talk to them about the victim names being included in the questionnaire and go from there. We figured it was worth seeing if they will agree to the small edits in track changes on the charges and on trial length (since we have a letter due on Tuesday). The questionnaire formatting is finicky, so if you prefer to chat through something please let us know. We would like to send the docs to them this afternoon in order to meet the deadline tomorrow. Thanks!

One other global thought/objection: they have a lot of questions that are framed in a very argumentative way. The court should ask these things neutrally if at all.
