

From: [REDACTED]
To: [REDACTED]
Cc: [REDACTED]

Subject: media heads up
Date: Mon, 18 May 2020 23:19:54 +0000

Just for situational awareness, you guys may have both seen this already but Netflix has fast-tracked their four-part Epstein series (presumably to beat the Lifetime documentary coming this summer), which will be released on May 27, so good chance there will be another flurry of news stories around that release.

It looks like the interviews include -- and may be focused on, based on the trailer -- [REDACTED], and [REDACTED]. It looks like [REDACTED] also appears, as well as some other Florida victims who would have been witnesses in an Epstein trial but aren't relevant for Maxwell. Not surprisingly, the trailer is pretty inflammatory but also kind of vague (sample [REDACTED] quote: "The monsters are still out there. You took our freedom, now we're going to take yours."). Anyway just didn't want it to blindside anybody in terms of potential reactions up the chain.

[REDACTED]
Assistant U.S. Attorney
Southern District of New York
[REDACTED]