According to police investigative documents obtained by ABC News, police prepared and submitted arrest warrant requests in May for Sarah Kellen, Epstein's assistant, standing on the right side of the picture, and Haley Robson, pictured in the middle, who police say was paid by Epstein to bring over young and underage girls to his house to massage Epstein.

Kellen was to be arrested as a principal in the first degree on four counts of unlawful sexual activity with certain minors and as a principal in the first degree on one count of lewd and lascivious molestation. Robson's warrant was for lewd and lascivious acts on a victim under 16 years of age.

According to police documents, some of the girls who massaged Epstein claimed that his assistant, Kellen, would often prepare the massage table and arrange the oils before Epstein's massages. Kellen would also allegedly call the girls when Epstein was in town to see if they wanted "work." One girl told police, "Work is the term used by Sarah to provide the massage in underwear," according to police documents.

One girl also claimed that Kellen had attempted to reach her after the girl had been interviewed by police to talk about the questioning, according to police documents.

Kellen did not return a call seeking comment.

Robson was interviewed by police in October 2005, and police say she admitted she brought six girls, ages 14 to 16, to Epstein's house to massage him. Robson was paid $200 each time she brought a girl over, according to her statement to police.
