Sure – it is addressed in the memo, but to excerpt, the quick answer is that she received $100,000 from Epstein in connection with her wedding in 2013, and then no payments following that until the $250K in 2018. During her employment with him, Epstein paid for her housing, travel, clothing, and food, in addition to paying her a salary, which began at approximately $35,000 per year, then increased annually until she was earning a bit over $100,000/yr. During that time, she advised that she did not have any other sources of income, no family connections (due to having been disfellowshipped), and no friends outside of Epstein's orbit. When Epstein went to jail, she took a pay cut to $75,000, which remained her salary until she left her job when she married her husband in 2013. (He also paid for [REDACTED] attorney when she was deposed in [REDACTED] lawsuit.) And we'll be prepared to discuss at the meeting as well, but wanted to summarize in case that's useful in advance.

[REDACTED] asks if we can be prepared to also discuss, in addition to the couple of big payments to [REDACTED], what we have learned about her regular salary, any other compensation, loans, and/or other benefits provided to her (housing, lifestyle, etc).
