That was new information to me as well. When we spoke a week ago while you were out, I asked them where things were with [REDACTED], I do not recall the prospect of her coming in coming up although we definitely did discuss how further attorney proffers were not likely to be helpful at this point.

I am surprised to hear, without prior consultation, that they have asked [REDACTED] to come in.

Sure, happy to catch up — we tried to stop by a couple times on Friday but missed you, so can set a time for this week. Unfortunately we have conflicts tomorrow from 5:30 on — we could potentially do Wednesday but Maurene will be in White Plains so would have to call in, or if there are available times on Tuesday we could try for that.

Just as backdrop, the meeting in California did not add any significant information except that we almost certainly couldn't bring an enticement charge (based on timing / location facts), and she's still not sure whether she wants to pursue a criminal case so we'll circle back with her attorneys later this month. She also didn't want to talk about specific conduct at this meeting so we don't have any additional info there. Meanwhile we're continuing to work on the pile of memos, and I don't think there's any additional update other than that [REDACTED] is coming in for a limited proffer (just talking about her background, to start) a week from Tuesday.
