Jeffrey Epstein’s accusers are seeking justice in the trial of Ghislaine Maxwell.

A medical examiner determined the disgraced financier died by suicide more than two years ago. Now, accusers say they see an opportunity for closure when Ghislaine Maxwell—Epstein’s longtime friend, confidante and employee who is accused of sex trafficking—goes on trial this week. Prosecutors have accused her of grooming girls for Epstein, including by befriending them and taking them shopping or to the movies. During a hearing Monday, Maxwell said she had committed no crime. She is charged with crimes including enticing a minor to travel to engage in illegal sex acts and transporting a minor with the intent to engage in criminal sexual activity. The indictment cites four anonymous women prosecutors say Maxwell groomed as teenagers for Epstein between 1994 and 2004.
