

From: Elkan Abramowitz / Jonathan Sack <[REDACTED]>

To: [REDACTED]

Subject: Limiting Victims' Rights: The Eleventh Circuit Reads the CVRA Narrowly

Date: Thu, 28 May 2020 17:32:52 +0000

---

May 28, 2020

New York Law Journal

by Elkan Abramowitz, Jonathan S. Sack

Limiting Victims' Rights: The Eleventh Circuit Reads the CVRA Narrowly

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

The life, and death, of Jeffrey Epstein has captured the attention of the legal community and broader public. The latest legal twist in the story is a decision by the Eleventh Circuit in In re Wild, 955 F.3d 1196 (11th Cir. 2020), which held that federal prosecutors did not have an obligation to inform, and consult with, Epstein's victims regarding their decision not to prosecute Epstein for sex trafficking. In our latest New York Law Journal article, "Limiting Victims' Rights: The Eleventh Circuit Reads the CVRA Narrowly," we summarize the federal Crime Victims' Rights Act and discuss the majority, concurring and dissenting opinions of the divided Eleventh Circuit. We hope you are all staying healthy and safe.

Best Regards,

Elkan Abramowitz and Jonathan Sack

A VIEW FULL ARTICLE

Elkan Abramowitz

Morvillo Abramowitz Grand Iason & Anello PC

565 Fifth Avenue

New York, New York 10017

Jonathan S. Sack

Morvillo Abramowitz Grand Iason & Anello PC

565 Fifth Avenue

New York, New York 10017

For more articles, please visit maglaw.com/publications

A CONTACT US

Copyright © 2020 All Rights Reserved. This communication may contain attorney advertising. Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome.

Privacy Policy | Unsubscribe