Full description from the daily:

[REDACTED]
The only other time that I interacted with him was he had made arrangements for us to go see a movie. And so we went to go see — I believe it was “12 Monkeys,” or the Brad Pitt film.

[REDACTED]
Yeah, with Brad Pitt.

[REDACTED]
That was creepy. My memory was that he was sitting sort of in between [REDACTED] and I. Basically, the movie starts. And at some point he starts to kind of, you know, reach out to hold my hand. And then he sort of started kind of caressing it. And then at some point he would touch my shoe and kind of rub my foot and things like that.

She’s trying to process during the movie — what is happening here, is this normal?

[REDACTED]
When [REDACTED] would sort of turn or engage in conversation or something, then he’d drop my hand or stop doing that to my foot, which was — because I felt so uncomfortable, but then I was also trying to go back and forth in my mind between whether or not — is this weird? I mean, it feels weird to me. But maybe he’s kind of fatherly towards me? But that doesn’t jibe, obviously, with the idea that he was keeping it from [REDACTED] in some way by shielding her so she couldn’t see it.
