Sure – we have indicated that we are generally interested in speaking with her, but I think internally our view was that if we feel we're able to charge without doing this interview first, that it's likely a good candidate for a post-charge conversation. As a refresher, [REDACTED] was an assistant to GM approximately 2003-07, and functionally worked for both GM and JE. JE paid her through his corporation. During her employment, she was over 18 [REDACTED]. On at least three occasions, GM instructed her to go to JE residence and she was assaulted; on two of those occasions, there were other women in the room and [REDACTED] was instructed to engage in sexual acts with those women, one of whom was [REDACTED] and the other [REDACTED] doesn't remember the name of. More generally, she is also a witness to the relationship between JE and GM. She also noted that GM sometimes used the alias "Jennifer Miller."

Because she was not underage, and her timeline doesn't overlap with when we think GM was chargeable, I think we didn't feel a need to interview pre-charge, but we certainly can if that changes, her attorneys are happy to schedule it if and when we would like.

Can you remind me what the status is here – have we requested an interview with this witness? Thanks.

Teri,

Thanks for being in touch. In the first instance, before we would request an interview directly, it would be helpful for us to get a full attorney proffer from you about what the client's information is, what you expect she would convey in an interview, any relevant documentary or other corroborating materials, etc. That way we can make sure we're not re-victimizing any individual unnecessarily, and be efficient with any necessary follow-up interview of the individual him- or herself. Please let us know when a good time would be for an attorney proffer? And we can figure out scheduling.

thanks very much,
