Hi [REDACTED],

As a heads up, we wanted to pass along something we learned on a call this evening. We spoke with attorneys at WilmerHale who represent J.P. Morgan in connection with [REDACTED] in the Epstein case (and their own internal investigation into the matter). They wanted us to know that they've learned today that Barclays is planning to make a public statement tomorrow noting that Jes Staley is "under investigation." The attorney we spoke with did not have information about what the substance of the statement would be beyond that – we don't know, for example, whether the statement would say it is an investigation by financial regulators, or a law enforcement matter, or whether it would be vague. We also don't know whether the statement would reference that the investigation is Epstein-related. We haven't dealt with Barclays in this case, so we don't have a way of getting more information beyond that.

Since you've been dealing with the FCA on this, we just wanted to give you a heads up.
