I just received another concerning email from this claimant, which I will forward to you. The allegations are completely without merit and nonsensical, but I am very troubled by the personal information she invokes and the tone of her email. Please advise.

I hope you are doing well. If you recall, we spoke earlier this year about the compensation program for Epstein victims – it was a very helpful conversation, and I so appreciate you taking the time to talk.

I am reaching out again because we received the attached email from a disgruntled claimant, threatening bodily harm. This is just the most recent of many similar emails and voicemails that this person has directed toward me and my staff over the last year. Are you available for a brief call to discuss?

Thanks,
Jordy

Special Agent [REDACTED],

Just following up on this request. I would greatly appreciate having a brief call, at your convenience. I understand that this is an ongoing investigation and that you are subject to restrictions on what you can say, but any general information you can share about overall process would be incredibly helpful in our evaluation and assessment of claims filed for compensation.

Many thanks,
Jordy

Special Agent [REDACTED],

I serve as the Administrator of the independent Epstein Victims' Compensation Program, the litigation-alternative compensation program established last year to resolve the claims of victims of Jeffrey Epstein. I was referred to you through Detective [REDACTED] – see below. I was hoping we could set up a time to talk. Are you available tomorrow, or any time next week? I recognize the sensitivity of the matter and limitations about what we can discuss, but would appreciate having an opportunity to connect.
