Whatever you need. I am in Mexico City right now, but will do what I can with what I got to help. Don't hesitate to reach out. And remember, the only stupid question is the one you don't ask.

The simple answer is yes. With the exception of the cloud key. Most of the items that are confounding you are just computers or very large storage devices for digital data. It is impossible to say exactly what is on it without a forensic exam. All of the words that are confusing you are just descriptive words that help me tell one device from another. The cloud key is a device that identifies a user to a service over the internet. We need it to get the data that is saved "in the cloud" but the information contained on it is probably very little, but it will enable us to access much more.

I'm sorry, I don't understand what exactly that means. What is a "6 bay w/ 146 GB drives"? What is a "tower"? What is a "Unfi video"? What is a "Unfi cloudkey," what is a "Panasonic"?

Everything on there is a computer with the exception of the iPod. I concur with [REDACTED] that we don't need to search it.
