I've been unable to get any clarification on this question. The jury has finished for the day and was sent home. They are not sitting tomorrow or Friday. They will continue deliberating on Monday. Have a good holiday!

Hi [REDACTED]

Thanks for the update, appreciated as always. We've been following the transcripts over here too. There was mention on Friday of (p2693) - And we were confused about the issue related to the person who had asked for anonymity who was a plainclothes police officer in the United Kingdom. So when defense referred to a witness potentially from the United Kingdom, that's what we thought that was referring to.

Any more details on this? Is there an officer from the UK who was a witness?

Good luck with the verdict

Thanks

The Defense and the Govt have wrapped their cases up. They will do their closings on Monday and the jury could have the case late Monday or most likely Tuesday. Hope to have a verdict by end of next week. We will keep you posted but I'm sure the media will beat us to it!

Hi [REDACTED]
Many thanks for the update. It's much appreciated as I'm sure it's full on for you both at the moment. Nothing else needed but grateful for further updates as the trial goes on. The media over here are reporting extensively on it as you can imagine.

Hope all is well. Just a quick update. The trial started yesterday. The first witness, Epstein's pilot, is currently on the stand (should be done this afternoon) and will be followed by the first victim. So far there has been 2 or 3 questions today by the defense team of the pilot; where he was asked to confirm if Prince Andrew flew on Epstein's plane. The pilot confirmed this fact. This was the extent of the questions pertaining to London/UK. We expect a few brief questions when the first victim goes on about some interactions she had with Epstein at his residence in London. This victim should go on the stand this afternoon. We will update you if anything else comes up.

Let us know if you need anything else.

Hi [REDACTED]
Hope you're well. As you're approaching the trial date, I'm just enquiring as to whether any more London / UK based matters have arisen or are likely to come up at the trial?

Thanks
