By the way, in case Judge Brannon is not available when everyone else is and things need to be pushed back even further, I will not be available Aug. 17-23 due to my upcoming multi-city college move-in road trip.

I fly out of town on the afternoon of 7/29 and don't get back to Miami until 8/7. I know [REDACTED] is out of town during the last week in July, so that may be a bad period for the mediation in case we need to get his approval, on anything. (I know [REDACTED] is also taking vacation around that period, but I'm not sure whether that has been scheduled; we can check with him tomorrow.) I have a conflict at noon on 7/20, but this would override that obligation. I also have an office obligation at noon on 7/22 (a brown bag with Major Crimes), but that could be rescheduled again if needed.

In short, from my perspective, 7/21 (my only conflict-free day) would be best, followed by 7/20 and then 7/22. The 7/25-7/28 dates might also work, provided at least [REDACTED] is around on those dates.

Hi [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] – I am hoping that we can get this done without another visit to Judge Brannon, but please see below about re-setting the date.

Of those dates, I am available 7/20-7/22, 7/25-7/29 (I have mag court duty that week but can probably find someone to cover), and 8/3-8/4.

Thanks.

Hi Marie,

Brad will be your point of contact in working out substantive issues on the settlement. I write on a procedural issue, specifically because both Brad and I would really like to move the mediation. I am return from a week in Israel Sunday night and will have to fly out Monday to Florida for the Tuesday depo. Brad has a series of depositions that must be completed by the end of the month. And, Brad tells me, you have some busy days ahead too, and we don't have the letter of apology yet to review.

In light of all this, can we all agree to ask the judge to move the mediation back a couple of weeks? I'd like to give some additional days to the Judge in our motion. Here are days in late July that work for me. If you and Brad can let me know you're schedules, we can propose some other dates for the mediation.

Thanks in advance for your anticipated cooperation.

Good dates for me:

July 19-22.

July 25-29.

Aug 2-4.

Paul
