

drug kingpins, murderers of federal law enforcement officers, and nearly 60 additional categories of violent felons."^[124] It also included a subsection of assault weapons ban for a ten-year period.^[125]

After two years of Democratic Party control, the Democrats lost control of Congress to the Republicans in the mid-term elections in 1994, for the first time in forty years.^[126]

A speech delivered by President Bill Clinton at the December 6, 1995 White House Conference on HIV/AIDS projected that a cure for AIDS and a vaccine to prevent further infection would be developed. The President focused on his administration's accomplishments and efforts related to the epidemic, including an accelerated drug-approval process. He also condemned homophobia and discrimination against people with HIV. Clinton announced three new initiatives: creating a special working group to coordinate AIDS research throughout the Federal government; convening public health experts to develop an action plan that integrates HIV prevention with substance abuse prevention; and launching a new effort by the Department of Justice to ensure that health care facilities provide equal access to people with HIV and AIDS.^[127]

The White House FBI files controversy of June 1996 arose concerning improper access by the White House to FBI security-clearance documents. Craig Livingstone, head of the White House Office of Personnel Security, improperly requested, and received from the FBI, background report files without asking permission of the subject individuals; many of these were employees of former Republican administrations.^[128] In March 2000, Independent Counsel Robert Ray determined there was no credible evidence of any crime. Ray's report further stated, "there was no substantial and credible evidence that any senior White House official was involved" in seeking the files.^[129]

On September 21, 1996, Clinton signed into law the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA), which defined marriage for federal purposes as the legal union of one man and one woman; the legislation allowed individual states to refuse to recognize gay marriages that were performed in other states.^[130] Paul Yandura, speaking for the White House gay and lesbian liaison office, said Clinton's signing DOMA "was a political decision that they made at the time of a re-election". In defense of his actions, Clinton has said that DOMA was intended to "head off an attempt to send a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage to the states", a possibility he described as highly likely in the context of a "very reactionary Congress".^[131] Administration spokesman Richard Socarides said, "the alternatives we knew were going to be far worse, and it was time to move on and get the president re-elected."^[132] Clinton himself said DOMA was something "which the Republicans put on the ballot to try to get the base vote for Bush up, I think it's obvious that something had to be done to try to keep the Republican Congress from presenting that".^[133] Others were more critical. The veteran gay rights and gay marriage activist Evan Wolfson has called these claims "historic revisionism".^[132] In a July 2, 2011, editorial The New York Times opined, "The Defense of Marriage Act was enacted in 1996 as an election-year wedge issue, signed by President Bill Clinton in one of his worst policy moments."^[134] Ultimately, in United States v. Windsor, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down DOMA in June 2013.^[135]

Despite DOMA, Clinton was the first president to select openly gay persons for administrative positions,^[136] and he is generally credited as being the first president to publicly champion gay rights.^[137] During his presidency, Clinton issued two substantially controversial executive orders on behalf of gay rights, the first lifting the ban on security clearances for LGBT federal employees^[138] and the second outlawing discrimination based on sexual orientation in the federal civilian workforce.^[139] Under Clinton's leadership, federal funding for HIV/AIDS research, prevention and treatment more than doubled.^[140] Clinton also pushed for passing hate crimes

Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for your recent enquiry, and we are sorry to hear how this is affecting you.

eSafety and Adult Cyber Abuse

The eSafety Commissioner's (eSafety's) primary role in dealing with cyberbullying complaints is to assist with the rapid removal of cyberbullying material targeted at Australian children, on social media services.

Please be aware that eSafety, therefore, has no legislative power to investigate adult cyber abuse complaints, formally. However, we do work to guide people where we can and provide advice on what they can do themselves.

In the most serious cases, we will use our existing relationships and escalation pathways with social media services to effect take-down of harmful material that is considered to be serious cyber abuse in nature or, where required, we will refer the matter to law enforcement.

Digital surveillance * - IDENTIFIED AS ILLEGAL SURVEILLANCE RESULTING IN ILLEGAL ACTIVITY

Your situation sounds like it may be digital surveillance, which is not an area we generally handle or have experience in. You may wish to approach your email (and any other relevant) service provider about the situation.

You may also wish engage an IT consultant to assist you in this matter or a cyber digital forensic expert to assist you further and we'd encourage you to consider doing this in the meantime.

Reporting to police

If you wish to pursue this or to make a formal report to police, the following steps may help you prepare:

- Prepare a timeline of what has taken place
- Place any screenshots you have in a word document (provide a summary below each image explaining what the screenshot relates to)
- Provide copies of any URL's you may have (you can obtain the URL by copying and pasting the URL address from your browser address bar)
- If you believe you know who the person is that is targeting you online, provide as much detail about the person.

I have attached our Adult Cyber Abuse Resource sheet which contains useful eSafety and support links. You may want to reach out to support services to help you in this difficult time.

We have now finalised your matter for now and hope the above information assists you.

Regards,

Cyber Abuse Team
