* You may also wish to seek advice from the Legal Services Commission of South Australia (LSC), which provides legal aid to the public and offers a free advisory service on most legal matters.

Dear Ms Pearce

I write in response to your letter dated 31 December 2019, enclosing a package of documents relating to your complaint. * - USB FLASH DRIVE

I have reviewed your correspondence and the associated documents. I understand that your primary concern is that employees of SA Health allegedly stole your business development plans in Port Pirie between 2007 and 2011.*

While I appreciate receiving your correspondence, I am unable to investigate this matter as it falls outside of my portfolio responsibilities. Matters relating to SA Health fall within the portfolio responsibility of the Minister for Health and Wellbeing, the Hon Stephen Wade MLC. You may wish to raise your concerns with Minister for Health and Wellbeing directly. You can write to his office at GPO Box 2555, Adelaide SA 5001.

I have not referred your correspondence to the Minister for Health and Wellbeing in the usual course given your reference to your complaint to the Office of Public Integrity. I remind you that section 54(3) of the Independent Commissioner Against Corruption Act 2012 prohibits the disclosure of information that is connected to a matter that forms or is the subject of a complaint under that Act, except in very limited circumstances.

I suggest that you consider obtaining independent legal advice in relation to these matters. The Legal Services Commission of South Australia provide a free advisory service on most legal matters. The service is available by calling 1300 366 424 or (08) 8436 3555.

I also note your comments about the decriminalisation of sex work in South Australia. The Statutes Amendment (Decriminalisation of Sex Work) Bill 2018 was introduced into Parliament by the Hon Tammy Franks MLC. The Bill failed to receive the votes required in the House of Assembly on 13 November 2019. While I respect the views of my Parliamentary colleagues, it is disappointing that the Parliament denied the Bill passing to the Committee Stage. - AGREES WITH THE BILL BEING

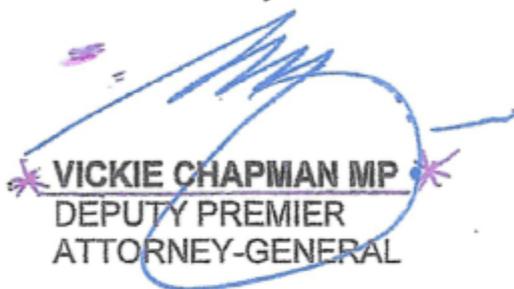

PASSED FOR PROSTITUTION TO BE LEGALISED,
REFER TO STAGE 2 SEXUAL TARGETING.

In my view, the practice of the sale of sex has existed since time immemorial, [REDACTED] continue to exist without the passage of the Bill through the Parliament.

Unfortunately, the practice will occur without the protections that could have been afforded to sex workers under the Bill. Sex workers remain in a position where their health, welfare and safety is a risk and where they may be prosecuted for their work. I will consider any new legislation to decriminalise sex work that may be brought before the Parliament in the future.

Thank you for raising your concerns with me.

Yours sincerely

short her courses in Adelaide in 1982, and moved to Melbourne to work with the Australian Union of Students.<sup>[20]</sup> In 1983, she became the second woman to lead the Australian Union of Students, serving until the organisation's discontinuation in 1984. She was also the secretary of the left-wing organisation Socialist Forum.<sup>[21][22]</sup> Having transferred her studies to the University of Melbourne, Gillard graduated with a Bachelor of Laws degree in 1986 and a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1989.<sup>[23]</sup> In 1987, she joined the law firm Slater & Gordon in Werribee, Victoria, working in industrial law.<sup>[11]</sup> In 1990, she was admitted as a partner; at the age of 29, she was the youngest partner within the firm, and one of the first women to hold the position.<sup>[24][25]</sup>

Early political involvement

From 1985 to 1989, Gillard served as President of the Carlton branch of the Labor Party.<sup>[6]</sup> She stood for Labor preselection in the Division of Melbourne prior to the 1993 federal election, but was defeated by Lindsay Tanner.<sup>[26]</sup> At the 1996 federal election, Gillard won the third position on Labor's Senate ticket in Victoria, behind Robert Ray and Barney Cooney.<sup>[27][28]</sup> However, on the final distribution of preferences she was defeated by Lyn Allison of the Australian Democrats.<sup>[29][30]</sup>

In 1996, Gillard resigned from her position with Slater & Gordon to serve as chief of staff to John Brumby, at that time the Leader of the Opposition in Victoria.<sup>[6][30][31]</sup> She was responsible for drafting the affirmative-action rules within the Labor Party in Victoria that set the target of preselecting women for 35 per cent of "winnable seats". She also played a role in the foundation of EMILY's List, the pro-choice fund-raising and support network for Labor women.<sup>[32]</sup>

Gillard has cited Welsh Labour politician Aneurin Bevan as one of her political heroes.<sup>[24]</sup>

Member of Parliament (1998–2007)

Gillard was first elected to the House of Representatives at the 1998 federal election representing Lalor, a safe Labor seat near Melbourne, replacing Barry Jones who retired. She made her maiden speech to the House on 11 November 1998.<sup>[33]</sup> Gillard was a member of the standing committee for Employment, Education and Workplace Relations from 8 December 1998 to 8 December 2001, in addition to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Affairs from 20 March 2003 to 18 August 2003. Within the joint committees, she was a member of the Public Accounts and Audit from 8 December 1998 to 11 February 2002, in addition to the Native Title and the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Land Fund from 20 March 2003 to 11 August 2003.<sup>[6]</sup>

Shadow Minister (2001–2007)

After Labor's defeat at the 2001 federal election, Gillard was elected to the Shadow Cabinet under then-Labor Leader Simon Crean, where she was given responsibility for Population and Immigration. In February 2003, she was given additional responsibilities for Reconciliation and Indigenous Affairs.<sup>[34]</sup> In these roles, in the wake of the Tampa and Children Overboard affairs, which were partly credited with Labor's 2001 election loss, Gillard developed a new immigration policy for the Labor Party.<sup>[13]</sup>

Gillard was later promoted to the position of Shadow Minister for Health and Deputy Manager of Opposition Business in the House (to Mark Latham) on 2 July 2003.<sup>[25][35]</sup> During this time, she shadowed Tony Abbott, with the rivalry between the two often attracting attention from the media.<sup>[36]</sup> She was later given additional responsibility for managing opposition business in the House of Representatives by Latham, who had succeeded Beazley as Labor Party leader.<sup>[37]</sup>

Unfortunately, at this stage, Ms Pearce found it difficult to avail herself for an assessment to address the Court's queries about her mental competence to commit the alleged offences and fitness to stand trial. I would be willing to reassess her for the Court once she has been further assessed and treated for her condition. I trust that the above is of assistance and would be happy to provide further clarification if required.
