Dear Barnaby:

Martin Nowak has been sharing with Enhanced Education his proposed new research applications of evolutionary game theory to the behavioral sciences. As you know, Enhanced Education is very interested in supporting Martin's work. We understand that the John Templeton Foundation is currently considering a project proposal in which Enhanced Education would have the opportunity to partner with the John Templeton Foundation through contributions which Enhanced Education has made to Harvard University's Program for Evolutionary Dynamics and allocated to Harvard University Fund 347150, $1,500,328 [$1,304,633 direct costs + $195,695 indirect costs] of which contributions have been budgeted for this project.

In 2003 Enhanced Education established a gift to the Program for Evolutionary Dynamics to support precisely this type of cutting edge research. Please know that the University has already secured the stated amount and that Martin's administrative team intends to apply said funds to this project for the proposed 3-year period [January 1, 2016 - December 31, 2018]. Enhanced Education is very enthusiastic about the potential of collaborating with the John Templeton Foundation, as we have a shared mission to promote important and timely research.

Very truly yours,

Darren Indyke
Vice President
