I love that [REDACTED] an [REDACTED] too haha He's is so intelligent yet has never makes me feel stupid when I have a question!

I feel sad about non-profits but it just seems I'm not getting out of it what I thought I would and if I'm not making any actual changes then why do it! It's very sweet of you to suggest the guy you know....not sure the commute to Greenwich is something I want to commit to right now but I really appreciate you thinking of it and I will give it some serious thought! If you also hear of anyone in the city (any of Jeffrey's associates etc) please do let me know!

GREAT on [REDACTED]! I love that he is an [REDACTED]...wow...

Agree on non-profit...as great as they are, there is no money to be made really...I know of a guy who is looking for an assistant in Greenwich, CT...he works for JP Morgan...let me know if you want to apply! His assistant is moving to Boston...

Oh! [REDACTED]! [REDACTED] do get tougher as you get older haha. It's a great [REDACTED] though to have your family with you! Hope you have a

I was in [REDACTED] visiting my cousin! I haven't been to [REDACTED] but [REDACTED] is pretty great!

I'm still dating the guy from July! His name is [REDACTED] and he is an [REDACTED]! He's pretty great....the best boyfriend I've had so far haha. We plan on moving in together in the next couple of months!

I started working about 2 months ago at the the [REDACTED]. It's a great institution but I'm starting to question my decision to work in the non-profit sector - I can barely live off of the salary and there are alot of anxious personalities in the field! Too much stress for me....I may start looking for an assistant position soon! I want to save money and move out of the city asap! Probably Westchester or upstate - maybe even CT!

How are [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]?

Thank you for keeping your ears open for me. Non-profits are tough!!
