Hi Jeffrey,

Thanks again for the recommendation for a position with ARF, and just want to let you know it didn't work out. Joe said it wasn't - I really have no idea why. Fred was delightful and we had many laughs, serious conversations, and he was a great mentor. He told me to 'always watch the other person's mouth' - great advise.

Joe did so many wonderful things for Fred, but for some reason recently everything fell apart (the main nurse trying to take over I think). He said he just wants to go to Malibu to be with his girlfriend, and I offered to take more responsibility, but he turned it away. Know the Parkinson's is getting worse, and feel bad for him, but unfortunately Fred is the one who will be hurt the most.

If you hear of anything else, please let me know - more VC, less evil nurse 😊😊😊. I did find a company that is developing a robot caregiver for seniors and wounded warriors. They have received one patent and close to another - ready for initial production. This market is huge! They are only looking for $100,000 this round - let me know if you're interested and I'll get you more information. All we'd have to do is incorporate the Microsoft Band technology, Mayo Clinic wellness (air quality indicators) and think we'd have a winner.

Love and Happiness,

PS. It was a good lesson - who is going to take care of you? A wealthy older man will have nurses and caregivers try to take advantage and manipulate the situation to their interests. I think an explicit list of you want to do should be compiled well in advance of getting sick, or you'll be open to people locking you in into their desires. I experienced first hand when [REDACTED]
