

From: [REDACTED] >
To: "DiChristina, Mariette" <[REDACTED]>
Subject: Re: for Jeffrey
Date: Mon, 20 Oct 2014 16:17:39 +0000

Ha yes! I'm actually on my plane now ready to go home.

Sent from my iPhone

On Oct 20, 2014, at 12:13 PM, "DiChristina, Mariette" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

> Thanks, [REDACTED]! Aren't you supposed to be on vacation or something?! Enjoy!

>

> Best,

>

> Mariette

> -----

> Mariette DiChristina

> Editor in Chief and SVP

> Scientific American

>

>

>

>

>

> @mdichristina

> ScientificAmerican.com

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> On 10/20/14 10:44 AM, "[REDACTED]" > wrote:

>

>> Thank you! I have forwarded on the Jeffrey.

>>

>> Sent from my iPhone

>>

>> On Oct 20, 2014, at 9:10 AM, "DiChristina, Mariette"

>> <[REDACTED]> wrote:

>>

>>> Hi [REDACTED],

>>>

>>> Hope you are well. I traveled for a month (four places in five weeks) >>> and realize I forgot to give Jeffrey some writer ideas! I am awful.

>>> Please extend my apologies to him.

>>>

>>> I was thinking about his areas of interest. Here are three people. I >>> have NOT contacted any of them, but I know them all personally and would >>> be happy to connect you if he likes their background.

>>>

>>> Paul Raeburn

>>> Paul has both a physics degree AND a lot of experience covering >>> neuroscience topics. He's a former AP reporter, formerly of >>> BusinessWeek, spent many years running the Council for the Advancement >>> of Science Writing's annual conference (the whole gig there is to scout >>> out interesting stories that would make great sessions. He's currently >>> writer for the Knight Science Journalism Tracker at MIT, but he's based >>> here in NY. Plus, he's a swell guy. I've known him since my days at >>> Popular Science (oh, at least 25 years. Paul has written several books, >>> most recently Do Fathers Matter? E-mail: Paul Raeburn

>>> <[REDACTED]>
>>>
>>> Ferris Jabr
>>> Ferris is a former staff editor of Scientific American, who has >>> recently gone freelance to pursue his dream of writing long, long pieces >>> for places like the New Yorker. I think we will all be working for him >>> some day. His coverage area specialty is neuroscience, BUT he can pretty >>> much do anything. I've seldom seen as impressive a young writer. Really.
>>> He's in New York. E-mail: Ferris Jabr <[REDACTED]>
>>>
>>> Corey Powell
>>> Corey is former editor in chief of Discover, and a lovely writer. His >>> background and preference is to cover a lot of physics and astronomy.
>>> He's also written a book, and is a marvelous reporter and a friend of >>> mine. He's in New York. E-mail: Corey Powell
>>> <[REDACTED]> Also [REDACTED]
>>>
>>> I could send more. So sorry for my slowness!
>>>
>>> Still happy to welcome Jeffrey to our offices one Monday, if he is ever >>> available. I'm traveling (London) next week, back in NY the week after >>> and then away in Dubai for the Global Agenda Councils in Dubai and then >>> the World Library of Science launch in Paris the second week of >>> November. Back again November 17.
>>>
>>> Hope all is well!
>>>
>>> Best,
>>>
>>> Mariette
>>>
>>> -----
>>> Mariette DiChristina
>>> Editor in Chief and SVP
>>> Scientific American
>>> [REDACTED]
>>> [REDACTED]
>>> [REDACTED]
>>> [REDACTED]
>>> @mdichristina
>>> ScientificAmerican.com
>