 PIPPIN

BROADWAY MEETS BIG TOP IN DIANE PAULUS' MAGICAL NEW PIPPIN

After bringing acclaimed revivals of Hair and The Gershwins' Porgy and Bess to Broadway, director Diane Paulus still has some magic to do, and she'll be doing it with the help of some extremely dexterous performers. Starting March 23, the first Broadway revival of Stephen Schwartz's PIPPIN begins previews at the Music Box Theatre. While it still features the sinuous Bob Fosse moves that helped make the show so memorable in 1972, it also introduces a new brand of razzle-dazzle.

 What else is playing on Broadway?

"Sorry, are those piano notes bothering you?" Matthew James Thomas is having his piano tuned. And he wants to make sure he can be heard over the plinking sounds. That piano will get a workout over the next few months. This is where Thomas, an open-faced 24-year-old from the United Kingdom, will prepare for the title role in PIPPIN. Read more.
