Why would that be? We were kicked off the internet yesterday and this morning when I came in again...Harry was too...

Then I picked up my phone and there it was! In my email on my iPhone as an attachment but still not on my computer. So I forwarded the email with the attachment from my iPhone to Darren. I assume he could open it from his lap top.

Is that the scan came thru to my iphone WAY before it came to my computer email...and it made all the emails I was receiving after this scan stall to my email...Darren is saying it's not right and to have you come in and take a look...but do you think it is normal because I am not using the web based gmail? Instead I use whatever this is I use? (ha! do you understand what I mean?)
