Hello Richard,

We have had many nibbles, but no firm bites as of yet. The market that had remained strong in our neighborhood, even though everywhere else was suffering, seemed to have taken the same turn right when we put it on the market. I have been losing sleep about it because I was so sure that the trend would remain the same in our area and that it would sell within 2 weeks. All of the houses had, and then something shifted and now none of them are. We know it will sell. The question is when. It still remains a very desirable neighborhood (location) and property. I am praying that Jeffrey is alright about the money for now and that we won't have to give it away. Can you comment?

My best, [REDACTED]
