Yves Saint Laurent is heralded as one of the greatest fashion designers of the twentieth century. Together with his once-lover and longtime business partner, Pierre Bergé, the Yves Saint Laurent Couture House broke boundaries that shook the world of fashion, forever changing the way women dressed. Along the way, they collected a one-of-a-kind art collection that could rival the holdings of any gallery. Upon Saint Laurent's death, Bergé decided to sell the collection that they had spent their lives amassing. The multi-million dollar sale was heralded as "The Auction of the Century."

"L'Amour Fou" is the winner of the Fipresci International Critics Prize at the Toronto International Film Festival and an official selection of the TriBeCa and San Francisco Film Festivals. As Saint Laurent once said, "Fashions fade, style is eternal," and this gorgeously stylish film will not fade from memory.

The film will open in theaters Friday, May 13th
