Is the market for new business jets really on the upswing?

By Allen Howell

CEO, Corporate Flight Management, Inc.

Molly McMillin of the Wichita Eagle recently reported that the market for new business jets "appears poised for a new growth spurt, although it's coming from a severely depressed base"...

Last Month's Poll Results

Question: Do you believe the passing of the FAA Reauthorization bill will help promote growth in the general aviation industry?

Answers:

1. Absolutely, upgrading our airports infrastructure will promote growth for GA companies. - 23%
2. Yes, but the FAA should have allocated more funding than what they did. - 20%
3. As long as they don't put User Fees on us I am fine. - 25%
4. I think it will help some but hurt others, like those that use the Essential Air Service Program that the plan would cut. - 30%
5. No, I do not believe what they purpose is going to help the GA industry but will help the airlines as always. - 1%
6. It really doesn't matter the FAA and administration is selling GA down the tubes anyway. - 1%

AD : Piper Aircraft, Inc. (Type Certificate Previously Held by The New Piper Aircraft, Inc.) Models PA-46-310P, PA- 46-350P, and PA-46R-350T Airplanes

AD ID: 2011-06-10

Effective Date: 05/06/2011

SUMMARY: We are superseding an existing airworthiness directive (AD) that applies to certain Piper Aircraft, Inc. Models PA-46-310P and PA-46-350P airplanes that are equipped with a Lewis or Transcoil turbine inlet temperature (T.I.T.) gauge and associated probe. That AD currently requires cleaning, inspecting, and calibrating the T.I.T. system; replacing any T.I.T. system that fails the calibration test; repetitively replacing the T.I.T. probe on certain airplanes; and inserting a copy of the AD into the pilot's operating handbook (POH) for certain airplanes...
