Jeffrey,

You may recall I mentioned the work of a young research scientist, Bruno Matarese, at Cambridge University. He is now ready to discuss this in more detail and thought it might be helpful to do this in the first instance on a Skype call.

To date, I have only told him that a friend of mine in the US called Jeffrey 'Stein' has from time to time sponsored research and just may be interested. Nothing more.

I was apprehensive that if I gave him your full name, he might be concerned by all the rubbish put out by the media when you google search Jeffrey Epstein. So it's just Stein fo the time being, unless you wish otherwise. Up to you.

I have been told that Bruno and Adrian, his academic supervisor, are amongst the most brilliant brains in Cambridge. So I think you might find them quite interesting to talk to. It's much better that they explain their research, than I try to, as I cannot grasp more than the most superficial elements.

They have proposed the Skype call to take place on February 9th at a mutually convenient time. To that end I have listed their respective emails, so you can take this further if you wish to do so.

As ever,

Mark
