Baby - your whole year has been such a success already - you got your degree and worked so hard every step of the way, sacrificing your personal and social life to do long long hours of work. Many people your age are relying on short cuts, and capitalising on the success of others around them and just partying - not even conducive search for fulfilling friendships or relationships. Just mindless parties and selfies and Instagram. Yes we are in priviledged positions but we have also worked our asses of every step of the way. My point of all this is it's very easy to look at what you feel you haven't done at a time like a ██████ and overlook all that you have done. I felt I hadn't been productive the year up until my ██ and was a bit low because the job thing is going slower than I thought. And then I thought, I got my visa all on my own, got my second degree at the ████████ ██████, ████████████████████████████████, saw my family through the second toughest time of our lives and still came out ok and made a success in all of that. You got a degree in a language that isn't even your first, held a serious job at the same time, had your own family concerns (we all do) had your share of relationship heartache and still came out strong. If we did this we can do anything!!! And if we don't get one particular job, who gives a shit, they can hire someone mediocre and well take the next, and if some guy couldn't see straight and has poor taste in woman, fuck them, they can have someone mediocre too. You have achieved a remarkable amount against many many odds and truly if you could get through all that you can get through anything and you have great things coming your way!!!! Truly great things... you work hard and you are a great , kind, intuitive , empathetic, beautiful and smart girl!!!
