Michael,

Please give me a final accounting of what was paid and what you charged, so I can determine if a balance is owed and get it done. The accounting needs to take into account the adjustment for the reduction in the amount of material as a result of not doing a diagonal installation. Please let me know asap, so I can finalize. thanks.

Re: 9 E 71st St., NYC

The amount of material needed to lay this particular floor straight is 1995 square feet. That's a piece of vinyl 12' x 166'3". The square footage needed for this product is greater since we need to work with the pattern match, seaming, and with sheet goods that are 12' in length. The amount ordered was 2214 square feet planning to install on a diagonal. Since it did not get installed diagonally, I will adjust the difference of the amount ordered to the amount needed.

The actual net square footage of the apartment is 1325 square feet. We did originally quote [REDACTED] on installing a vinyl tile, which would have used 1325 square feet. She did not opt to use that product.

As soon as I get word from our distribution on where the new material is I will call you.

Thank you.
