You are 100% right...no need to respond. You can defend yourself in actions...i am proud of you!

It makes no sense at all! I don't appreciate him saying clearly my focus is no longer on his needs or requirements. So unfair. Just because I don't want to play the role of wife anymore and be at his side 24/7. I'm not sure how, or if, I should respond.

I'm always making sure everything is set for him. He traveled yesterday and I basically coordinated everyone, told them what they needed to do to prepare, what they needed to send with him, etc..from [REDACTED]! And, the part about last week being "the toughest" of the year. For last weekend, I asked him if he needed me..he said no. So I went to [REDACTED]. I even said I'm happy to stay if he needed anything. And on Tuesday, I didn't bring it up or ask to go on Tuesday..he did and insisted on it! I was the one being hesitant to leave. But I'm sure it will do no good reminding him of these things. So frustrating.

It doesn't really make much sense. He seems to make a jab at you with the "Though this week was known for months as going to be the toughest of the year..." comment. Kind of back handed in a way...Its sad because it's the end of an era but it's not the end of you two. Just because you are refocusing your life doesn't mean you can't still work with him. This is the first step. Show him that you can still be a valuable and needed asset whilst living the life you want. You can do it, I know you can. And we will def need his help when it comes to publishing contacts and distribution for our book- so don't make him mad! hahah ☺ Love you!

I accept the idea of your proposal with great sadness. I am always available for you , when and if you need advice or help. As your focus is clearly no longer on my needs or requirements we should train someone as soon as possible . Though this week was known for months as going to be the toughest of the year ---- you were sorely missed. hope you are having fun
