

From: jeff davis <[REDACTED]>

To: ghislaine maxwell <[REDACTED]>

Subject: Re:

Date: Sun, 22 Dec 2002 19:35:21 +0000

that dream about the helicopter is in no way about having a fear of helicopters or flying. i love them. one day, i will learn how to fly a helicopter. with my mind.

and i agree with you about the perception vs. psychic thing. i don't think i'm psychic. i do think i'm very sensitive to patterns and "vibes," for the lack of a less groovy word. i think if you spend any time "in the moment," you are, as a result, linked to the past and future in some way.

because they're all the same, aren't they ghislaine?

i would love to fly around in a chopper with you. i'd also like more details about this person. this is kind of like those christmas calendars, where each day you get a new little gift. i hope by christmas i know whom we're talking about.

jeff.

On 12/22/02 9:04 AM, "G. Max" <[REDACTED]> wrote:

> Dear Mr Mega

>

> You should know that creative people (which of course you are) have a very > active sector of the brain cortex where your imagination and dream center > are related. You can be sure that anything that you dream, good bad or > indifferent, will happen somewhere to someone at some time. Translation - > if you are very well behaved you will get to fly with me in a helicopter.
> You should know that helicopters are very safe machines - most accidents > that occur in them are not fatal and most accidents are pilot error and the > largest majority of them are weather related. This means do not fly > helicopters in bad weather. + you are not physic you are sensitive > imaginative and perceptive, a person to whom happy coincidences occur - > lucky you.

>

>

> Ok - another detail - cute

>

> G

>

> PS

>

> Happy holidays - I have returned from a far flung Island where I was > marooned (me and my helicopter) and am now in a place surrounded by people > and festivities. I shall be returning to my isolated corner tom (me and my > chopper)

>

>