We are looking for three offices and access to a conference room in mid town Manhattan. This is for Bay City Capital (our merchant bank in biotech). We have just hired one full time person who lives in NY.

She was a senior investment banker at Citigroup. One office is for her, the others for visitors, partners etc. We can obviously find office space in NY. But in a situation like this, if for no other reason, there may be value in officing with other people in hopes of keeping your sanity. Any thoughts?
