

From: "G. Max" <[REDACTED]>

To: [REDACTED]

Subject:

Date: Sun, 22 Dec 2002 12:04:22 +0000

Dear Mr Mega

You should know that creative people (which of course you are) have a very active sector of the brain cortex where your imagination and dream center are related. You can be sure that anything that you dream, good bad or indifferent, will happen somewhere to someone at some time. Translation - if you are very well behaved you will get to fly with me in a helicopter. You should know that helicopters are very safe machines - most accidents that occur in them are not fatal and most accidents are pilot error and the largest majority of them are weather related. This means do not fly helicopters in bad weather. + you are not physic you are sensitive imaginative and perceptive, a person to whom happy coincidences occur - lucky you.

Ok - another detail - cute

G

PS

Happy holidays - I have returned from a far flung Island where I was marooned (me and my helicopter) and am now in a place surrounded by people and festivities. I shall be returning to my isolated corner tom (me and my chopper)