

The Monaco and spree
Principality investor is behind Dublin homes plan

NICOLE JUNKERMANN, a Monaco-based private equity investor, has emerged as the backer of a scheme of nearly 150 family homes planned by the family of property developer Sean Reilly, writes Gavin Doherty.

Junkermann, above, who set up United in Sports, a media and sports investment group, is a lender to Hansfield Investments, which last week sought permission for 146 houses at Hansfield and Barrwell in west Dublin. The directors of Hansfield Investments are Sharon and Deirdre Reilly, from Dunboyne, Co Meath.

Nanna recently sold €373m in loans linked to Sean Reilly. Hansfield Investments has spent €6.3m buying land for the housing scheme from the receiver to Manor Park Homes, the original developer of Hansfield and Barrwell. Junkermann and Ravelstone Holdings, a company in the Bahamas, have a charge over the company's assets.

Junkermann is an adviser to Triantic Capital Partners, which raised $2.2bn (£1.6bn) last year, and is on the board of Chinese sports distributor Shanghai Realty Sports.
