understood. . however what i like is the concept of pressure . says nothing at all about any one molecule , t gives useful information re the statistical . I wonder if people are more like the individual molecule and only at the statistical overview may give some info. the term social being, means part of a group. . left isolated t cannot thrive. the study of groups of individuals , actuarial tables etc. seems useful. but only at the boundary certainty or zero. does it say anything meaningful about any single person.
