

From: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
To: Jeffrey Epstein <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Subject: Fwd: Application requirements
Date: Thu, 19 Nov 2015 01:08:15 +0000

---

I am so shocked ?! It is a [REDACTED] guy I started to date in summer, the one that graduated from [REDACTED] I told you about

----- Forwarded message -----

From: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>
Date: Wednesday, November 18, 2015
Subject: Application requirements
To: [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]>

Hi dear!

A few questions/points:

1. Again, will it be you and your roommate living in that apartment? What will be the monthly rent?
2. How are you guys planning to pay it/do you have the income now, or will it be out of savings, or will you be looking for a job in the coming months?
3. If you will be living with a roommate, does she have a guarantor? I understand that it will be easier if I'm the only guarantor, but I don't think I've met your current/future roommate.
4. Between my ID, my SSN and my account number/billing address, they will have all the information needed for a full identity theft. I would like to deliver all the documents in person, or submit the bank statement partially blacked out (with only part of the address and account number shown). If they want me to deliver the documents in person, when can that happen?

And finally, on a completely separate note. Obviously I've come to trust you a lot and we're committing to stay in touch/trust each other going forward, and I'd like to be very upfront with you about what's going on in my life so that things between us don't turn sour at some point. Basically, up until this summer I had been in a relationship with this girl [REDACTED]. I'm still very close with her and there is a chance we will get back together in the future. To make matters more complicated, [REDACTED] and since we broke up, we haven't told many of our friends. This is what I meant by "not being completely emotionally available" that I was talking about the first time we met, and you asked me why I'm on WYP.

How does that affect things between us? First and foremost, I value you as a genuine and very good-hearted person, and I hope you see me the same way. You've always been super sweet to me, you've taken such genuine interest in my friends whenever I've introduced them to you, and you put the well-being of others above your own. These are all virtues that I want to nourish within myself as well, and so I do want you in my life, if that makes sense. Whether it is as a friend or something else is up to you.

Second, I'm obviously very attracted and interested in you, and I feel very flattered that you respond to my interest and the ways in which I express my affection. I don't want this to stop if it doesn't have to, and I wanted to see if you'll still be interested in being involved, even if I do end up getting serious with my ex again. And again, I immensely enjoy your company regardless of whether we treat each other as friends or more, so it is completely up to whatever you are comfortable with.

And of course, the guarantor thing is completely separate from this conversation, no question I'm happy to do it. It's just that I wanted to be upfront about everything, as I mentioned earlier.

I hope all that makes sense! Looking forward to hearing from you

On Wed, Nov 18, 2015 at 3:39 PM, [REDACTED] <[REDACTED]> wrote:

|

--

Sincerely

[REDACTED] [REDACTED]